PRESENTATIONS ON THE AUSTRALIAN HEALTH SYSTEM

Client	Various, including health service boards, Primary Health Networks, private companies, universities, professional bodies
Services	Facilitation, strategic briefings
Context	The Australian health system is better described as a complex set of inter-related and interactive systems. This complexity means that many organisations or professions have only a narrow engagement or insight into the health system as it relates to their specific work program. Understanding the broader context can help inform better decision making and more strategic approaches to problems and solutions.
Approach	AHHA has developed a range of presentations, designed to provide insight into the Australian health system. The presentations range from short verbal presentations, to longer interactive workshops and can be targeted at different levels of seniority, experience or engagement with the health system depending on the client requirements. They are regularly provided as part of strategic planning sessions, employee training, pre-conference workshops, board briefings and stand-alone workshops. AHHA brings together our in-depth knowledge of the health system and understanding of various drivers including clinical, operational, political and funding drivers to provide accessible, relevant presentations that leave the audience with significant insight.
Result	AHHA has been able to assist boards, management teams, profession specific groups, academics and more to gain a better understanding of the structure, drivers and realities of the health system and therefore ensure decisions are made and solutions are designed within the broader health system context.
